Learning Gardens

The Learning Gardens serve as a living horticultural classroom, featuring an ever changing display of perennials, annuals, wildflowers, and roses. This space offers year round interest and gives Ohio State students valuable hands on experience working with plants and landscape design. The gardens also include the twelve thousand square foot Green Roof on Howlett Hall, which shows how green infrastructure can lower energy use, extend roof life, improve air quality, and manage stormwater while providing a peaceful rooftop view. A walk through the Learning Gardens reveals art, trees, and ornamental plants of all kinds, creating a place that inspires learning, relaxation, and exploration.
